Quartermaster Volunteer Honored

Barrett was recognized for ten years of volunteer service from 1994 to 2004 and the substantial contribution his service has made to the Soldiers, retirees and civilians of the Quartermaster Corps. Barrett's service includes volunteering at the McGuire Veterans Hospital, U.S. Army Quartermaster Foundation, U.S. Army Quartermaster Museum, Fort Lee Tax Office, Prince George Lions Club, American Legion-Post 284 and with the Military Officers of America.

During the presentation, West reflected on how Barrett served as a mentor to him when Barrett was commandant of the U.S. Army Logistics Management College.

"It is humbling to have the opportunity to be here for this recognition," West said.

After the ceremony Barrett said "I don't do this to earn recognition. I believe we need to help because we all know someone who didn't make it back from the conflicts and wars in which our country has been involved. We should shoulder the debt for them."

Construction at Lee Gate

Chaplain's Corner Peace and Comfort in the Middle of Your Life Storm

by Chaplain (Capt.) Olga Westfall 244th Quartermaster Battalion

"Why did God allow this to happen to me? Why me, Lord?"

I am sure that there were times when you heard someone saying these words or maybe you yourself wondered what was going on in your life.

You were going through confusion and turmoil and maybe you were wondering where God was in the middle of that confusion and turmoil. Nobody is excluded from times of sorrow and pain. We all have good times and bad times, times of rejoicing and times filled with problems.

A wise man said, "There is a time for everything, and a season for every activity under heaven; a time to be born and a time to die, a time to plant and a time to uproot, a time to kill and a time to heal, a time to tear down and a time to build, a time to weep and a time to laugh, a time to mourn and a time to dance, a time to scatter stones and a time to gather them, a time to embrace and a time to refrain, a time to search and a time to give up, a time to keep and a time to throw away, a time to tear and a time to mend, a time to be silent and a time to speak, a time to love and a time to hate, a time for war and a time for peace." (Ecclesiastes 3:1-8).

Life is unpredictable and full of surprises. It is impossible to figure it out. We may plan one thing but something happens and our plans are frustrated. When I was growing up my mother told me that most of our lives we have to do things that we don't like. Only a small percentage of the remaining time in our daily life can we do what we enjoy. These wise words prepared me to face the difficulties and challenges of life. It is hard to go through life relying on your own strength. You need someone else to help you. You need other people and you need God!

About ten years ago when I worked for the Christian Broadcast Network in Ukraine, my supervisor, a godly woman, told me that life is unfair. At first, I disagreed with her because I believed that God is fair and He is in control of my life. But as I reasoned, I came to agree with this point of view. Life might be unfair for you: maybe you were passed up for the promotion, maybe you have had a broken relationship, health issues, financial difficulties, etc. However, there is always a reason that things happen. I believe that there is a lesson for us to learn in every situation. If we come to God and ask Him what it is that He wants us to learn through a particular experience, I believe that He will answer us in due time. It might take awhile for us to get it, but if we continue to seek His face and His will, He will show us why we had to go down that difficult road. The Word of God is full of promises. One of them is a guarantee of God's presence for His children. God says in Isaiah 43:1b-3a, "Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have called you by name; you are mine. When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; and when you pass through the rivers, they will not sweep over you. When you walk through the fire, you will not be burned; the flames will not set you ablaze. For I am the Lord, your God."

If you go through the storms of life wondering what is happening to you, asking the question "Why", I want you to look up to God, who is just a prayer away. He is never too busy for us and you don't have to schedule an appointment with Him.

Only He can give you peace and reassurance in the middle of your life's storm.

CFC Kicks Off on Post

Sherrie Brach, United Way, asks the Fort Lee community to donate to the combined federal campaign.

Story and photos by Travis Edwards

Fort Lee Public Affairs Office

The 2004 Combined Federal Campaign kicked off at Fort Lee last week with a very simple goal.

"Our first objective in this year's campaign is to contact 100 percent of the Soldiers and civilians on post," said garrison commander, Col. John Angevine.

The Combined Federal Campaign is the federal government's only authorized workplace solicitation of donations. Military and civilian employees choose which charity or charities they elect to support and can make straight donations or set up payroll deductions.

"The Combined Federal Campaign is an excellent opportunity for the total Army community to continue to set the standard and lead the way in caring for our fellow citizens while supporting the spirit of giving and generosity that is so a part of our American heritage," said garrison chief of staff, Esther Lee.

Fort Lee's monetary goal this year is $280,000, slightly higher than last year's total donations.

"Last year our unit key workers contacted over 9,000 Soldiers! Almost one third of them made a donation. All we need to do this year is convince a few more members of our community to make a donation or to increase their donation from last year and we will meet our goal," said Angevine.

A key worker has been designated for every section within Fort Lee as the CFC representative. The representative will pass out CFC donation forms and guide books which list the participating organizations for this year's campaign.

New check writing regulation

Check 21 is a new regulation that becomes effective Oct. 28 and allows financial institutions to send, receive and process electronic images of checks instead of having to transport physical paper checks to clear those items.

This will decrease "float" time between when the check is written and the time it is deposited from days to only minutes.

Remember to keep a close eye on your checking account and sign up for overdraft protection if available to prevent returned checks.

While many institutions are not yet ready to accept or process images now, most will use this new process in the future to operate more efficiently.

Writing "hot" checks or "floating" checks is a federal offense and is also punishable under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

MyPay offers more access

The new Restricted Access Personal Identification Number now allows service members or Department of the Army civilians to provide a spouse or trusted individual with a PIN that gives View-Only access to Leave and Earning Statement and W-2's.

This helps those deployed or those who have family or friends who need viewing access to the MyPay system.

To set the pin, sign-in at MyPay's Website, select the "Personal Settings" page, then "Restricted Access PIN". From here you input a RAPIN and provide it to a spouse or trusted individual. Then your spouse simply logs on using the family members social security number and uses their own RAPIN, thus giving them View-Only access.

With the RAPIN the spouse or family member can view and print the LES and W2 but Cannot make pay changes.

For information, visit <https://mypay.dfas.mil> or see your personnel services battalion.

Fort Riley grants ill youth wish to be Soldier

Story and photos by Gary Skidmore

Fort Riley Public Affairs

Seven-year-old Phillip Shriver has a new guardian angel -- a little bear angel with red, white and blue wings, wearing a helmet.

Shriver who has a life threatening illness, leukemia, received the memento during his visit to Fort Riley Sept. 20, from Command Sgt. Maj. James Savitski, 4th Battalion, 1st Field Artillery command sergeant major.

Shriver was here living his dream of being a Soldier -- if only for a day. His wish was granted by Fort Riley and the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Kansas.

Savitski said he received the bear from his daughter, Michelle, then 12 years old, while he was deployed to Iraq with the 3rd Brigade Combat Team.

"I figured my little guardian angel had done its job (kept him safe) and needed to be used somewhere else more appropriate" said Savitski.

"Phillip was the right person to give it to. I hope and pray it keeps him safe and protects and comforts him."

Shriver's day on Fort Riley was filled with Soldiering.

Fort Riley's youngest Soldier arrived by helicopter, provided by Company B, 158th Aviation, of the Kansas Army National Guard, of Olathe, Kan.

Shriver's tour of duty as a Soldier began with a visit to Range 18 where members of H Troop, 1st Cavalry Regiment were honing their scouting skills.

"This is cool," said Shriver as he made his way to the hatch on the Humvee and got behind the 50-cal. machine gun mounted on the vehicle.

Shriver's next stop on the tour was the 1st Battalion, 13th Armor motor pool where he climbed aboard and explored an M1-A1 Abrams Tank.

After a quick tour and a brief explanation of the tank's capabilities, the crew fired the tank up and rumbled off with Shriver.

"We just drove him around the motor pool," said Staff Sgt. Thomas Patrick, the gunner on the battalion commander's tank. "Phillip sure seemed to enjoy it."

When the tank returned, Shriver's dad, Chris asked him what he thought about the ride. The young tanker replied without hesitation, "That tank can run over your truck!"

Next stop was the Engagement Skills Trainer where Shriver shot an M-16 and 9mm pistol in a virtual environment.

"It's like a huge video game," said Richard Eyestone, Combat Arms Simulations Training instructor, as he assisted Shriver with loading a clip in his simulated 9mm pistol. "Targets will appear on the big screen, and you just have to shoot them."

At one point, Shriver's dad got down on the ground with his son and helped him aim the realistic weapon more accurately.

"That is about as real as you can get without actually firing a 9mm gun with real bullets," said Chris. "The gun kicks, and it sound like a gun firing. You just can't get more realistic than that."

Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Canuela completes 40 push-ups after 7-year-old Phillip Shriver tells Canuela to "drop and give me 40." Shriver was on Fort Riley after being granted his wish from Fort Riley and the Make a Wish Foundation of Kansas to be a Soldier for a day.

Honorary Command Sgt. Maj. Philip Shriver renders his best salute. The 7-year-old was Soldier on Fort Riley for a day as a result of having his wish granted by Fort Riley and the Make a Wish Foundation of Kansas.

After a stop at yet another virtual trainer that simulated tanks firing, it was chow time and Shriver was hungry.

Helping him with his tray, Savitski started Shriver down the serving line where he asked for peas and steak.

"He couldn't believe all the food we have here," said Savitski who said Shriver ate well.

"He eats just like a hungry soldier," said Savitski. "He did a great job."

Following lunch, Shriver was off to the Close Combat Tactical Trainer to train on a virtual tank.

"Are you ready to fire a tank?" asked retired Sgt. Maj. Jim Sands, Shriver's escort at the facility. "This going to be fun," he said as he and Shriver climbed into the trainer.

Sands told the honorary private, "If you need anything, I know what it's like to be sick. You just call me."

Sands is recovering from a liver transplant after liver failure and said he feels close to Shriver because of his life threatening illness.

"It doesn't matter what, just call," he said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Canuela, 24th Infantry Division command sergeant major, greeted Shriver and his parents in his office where the young private was promoted to honorary sergeant.

Shriver's mother, Lisa, assisted Canuela with pinning the sergeant stripes on her son's collar. Her eyes welled up with tears as her son stood at attention when the orders promoting him were read.

But the best was yet to come. Canuela took the newly promoted sergeant to the lobby of the headquarters where five sergeants major were waiting for the special visitor.

"It's my honor to promote you to the grade of honorary command sergeant major," said Canuela. In a certificate signed by the Sergeant Major of the Army, Kenneth Preston, Shriver was promoted again.

With little warning to those present the youngest command sergeant major on Fort Riley, belted out, "Drop and give me 20."

With a startled hesitation, all six sergeants major hit the ground. Counting out each push-up with "one sergeant major, two sergeant major" until they had completed the task at hand.

As one Soldier asked "permission to recover," Shriver showed his leadership potential, tossing back calmly over his shoulder, "Recover," and the senior NCOs came to their feet.

Canuela said when Shriver goes home at the end of the day, he hopes he takes with him a sense of belonging.

"That he is one of us -- a band of brothers and sisters, and Army of One," Canuela said. "Only in our country (can you be) a 7-year-old and love your Army and be loved back in return," he said.

"I love this country, and I only want to return my gratitude for allowing me to serve with them," said Canuela. "Phillip is special because he gave that special love that only those with the right heart would know."

CFC continued from Page 4

"The CFC campaign has been set up to provide every federal employee the opportunity make a difference in the community," said Capt. Scott Savoie, this year's Fort Lee CFC program manager. "Consider donations to organizations through the CFC an investment into improving the community."

"We aren't begging for contributions. We aren't asking people to give us something for nothing. We are giving the contributors the opportunity to do something for society, for the community, and for themselves," said Angevine. "There are many in need. When you look at the Donor Resource Guide -- everyone has a friend or a family member that has been touched by at least one of these organizations -- it is up to all of us to return that assistance!"

WIDE-ANGLE LENS

Column by Travis Edwards

Fort Lee Public Affairs Office

As a photojournalist I have the opportunity to see the world around us in a different perspective; through the wide-angle lens of my camera. My column, Wide-Angle Lens, focuses on the people, places, and events in our community that tweak my curiosity and concern.

American Soldiers and NASCAR pit crews share several unique organizational traits. Being a member of both requires extremely precise teamwork, public exposure in the international spotlight and constantly dangerous challenges at every turn, literally.

It was these traits and the bond that only true patriots understand that brought together more than 107,000 NASCAR fans, Americans on a Saturday night at the Richmond International Raceway during the third anniversary of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

The pre-race activities were no different than the usual Chevy Rock and Roll 400 at Nextel's "action track". Bands played their music long and loud, celebrities toured their favorite NASCAR driver's haulers, and fans flocked around hoping to get an autograph from just about anyone.

Other than the Busch Series Navy car having almost won the prior night's Emerson 250, there was little fanfare for the anniversary of the attacks of 9-11.

As the night progressed and the fans took their seats, the #01 Army car, driven by Joe Nemechek, seemed to gather more and more attention. At first several dozen delayed entry program Soldiers appeared taking pictures of and with the Army car and its driver. They often shared the scene with Martha Nemechek the unofficial Army team mother and official mother of its driver, Joe.

Moments passed and then Sgt. Maj. of the Army Kenneth Preston appeared, doing just what he does, communicating with Soldiers about their experiences and opinions on the Army. He uses this knowledge to testify before Congress and aid the Army Chief of Staff on behalf of the American Soldier. He is the highest-ranking enlisted Soldier in the U.S. Army and his presence sends a message of professionalism to Soldiers and Officers alike.

Then the Color Guard from Fort Lee's Noncommissioned Officer's Academy arrived, sharing the spotlight with the Sergeant Major of the Army. These senior noncommissioned officers also beamed with an understanding and competence of professionalism that held them apart from the crowd.

It wasn't until the Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld, arrived that I realized there was something different about this night under the lights at Richmond's "action track". And as usual, once I had figured it out, so had the rest of the media, as the surrounded the Secretary of Defense and the other military members in attendance for an impromptu press conference.

"I've come to support the troops and meet the fans," said Rumsfeld.

"The Army sees great potential in NASCAR fans since teamwork and leadership are key ingredients to success on the track," said Preston.

As the pre-race activities grew more and more towards the fanfare I was expecting for the Patriot's Day remembrance, I turned my attention to the hundred thousand fans sitting 20 meters from me on the outside of the three quarter's of mile track.

They were of all ages and gender, of all shapes and sizes. They were of all different ethnicities and creeds. Their only affiliation besides NASCAR drivers colors was their solemn remembrance of 9-11.

They wore American flag baseball hats and shirts, waved banners stating we'd "Never Forget 9-11", and batted around inflatable beach balls. The red, white, and blue ran rampant throughout the crowd.

As the color guard took the stage the crowd drew quite, all watching the precision and poise that the Fort Lee professionals used in presenting the nation's flag. They listened to an operatic version of God Bless America and cheered for more.

And then, as I had never seen before, the Secretary of Defense was asked to lead the crowd in the saying of the Pledge of Allegiance and a moment of silence for the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001 and for American troops who are the frontline of defense in the war on terror.

More than 107,000 fans cheer on the Army Team during the Chevy Rock n Roll 400 Sept. 11 as the Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Kenneth O. Preston, and NASCAR driver Joe Nemechek interact with the media on pit row with the Army race team.

But then it happened, the Secretary of Defense was stopped by the people as they, on their own, broke into a raging chorus, chanting "USA, USA, USA".

I couldn't capture this on film; this was something you had to witness firsthand; over 100,000 Americans of all ages, genders, races, and creeds, cheering on the country.

This was better than any large American flag held across the field or any fireworks show dedicated to the country. This was 100% American patriotism, unrehearsed and spontaneous. This was the reason we will not forget that terrible day in the fall of 2001 when terrorism struck our homes on a large scale for the first time.

I felt proud to be more than an American Soldier, I felt proud to simply be an American. I realized that the crowd did share my deep desire to never forget and always remain true to our values and traits that make us free.

It was one of those moments where you know that all the sacrifices; all the blood and sweat we've given for freedom, is worth it. September 11, 2001 reminded us that freedom isn't free. It is earned through the hard work, dedication, and sacrifice of our troops and citizens; and that is exactly what makes it worth fighting for.

An In-Depth Tour of the Story and photos by Timothy L. Hale

Did you know there was a World War II camp containing German and Italian prisoners of war near current on-post housing?

Did you know that Camp Lee was virtually bulldozed to the ground following the end of World War I only to be rebuilt for World War II?

Did you know that veteran CBS newscaster Walter Cronkite's grandfather's cousin was a commanding general of the 80th Infantry Division during World War I located here at Camp Lee?

The answers to these and many other historical facts can be found if you attend the U.S. Army Quartermaster Center and School Spouses' Tour.

Currently held twice a year, the QMC&S Spouses' Tour highlights many of the historical facts about Fort Lee and weaves them like a tapestry into the history-making events that Quartermaster warriors are participating in today.

"Spouses need to come on this tour especially if they don't know or understand what their husband or wife does," said Lisa Cummings, a Fort Lee spouse.

Tour participants received a welcome from Brig. Gen. Scott West, the 48th Quartermaster General and Quartermaster Center and School commanding general, before embarking on the tour.

"Family members get an opportunity to see what their spouses do here at Fort Lee. It is vitally important to what we do and this tour is an important tool for spouses and family members," West said.

Starting with a tour of the Army Women's and Quartermaster museums, tour participants get a snapshot of the 229 year history of the Corps. Then it was off on a guided bus tour led by QMC&S Historian Dr. Steve Anders.

"Fort Lee is like a small city with thousands of Soldiers and their families moving through here," Anders said.

In between stops on the tour, Anders pointed out sites that tell the story of Fort Lee's past, pointing out sites that were destroyed and some of those that still remain. The tour includes historical highlights such as the site of the Battle of Fort Mifflin, much of which was fought on what is now the site of the Highlights of the tour included the site of the Quartermaster Department's Military in the Field, where Soldiers push thousands upon thousands of supplies through miles of pipe virtually every day.

In addition, Anders took the tour to the Quartermaster Water Detachment site, where a water purification unit who suffered grievous injuries from a SCUD missile attack during Operation Desert Storm in 1991.

A stop at the Logistics Training Detachment saw 1st Class Kyle Montgomery, a veteran of Operation Enduring Freedom, give the spouses a look at the equipment tracked and distributed to units in the field. The tour also featured technology, such as equipment tracked and distributed for rail and road movement, with a focus on the group.

From there it was on to the Mortuary Affairs Center. Doug Howard, MATC deputy director, explained the process of collecting, identifying, and accounting for personal effects with dignity, reverence and respect. "It's the families who have given us their soldiers," he said.

A tour of the Aerial Delivery Department highlighted how supplies are delivered from the air throughout the world. Spouses were able to see a Laundry Aerial Delivery System, basically, a giant washer and dryer com-

"How come they don't make these for home use?" one spouse was heard saying after the tour.

After a lunch at one of the post dining facilities, it was on to the Army Center for Excellence, Subsistence where the group was able to see food service students in action.

Steve Posser, the chief of culinary skills training division, highlighted the accomplishments of food service personnel in all areas of the occupational specialty. Members of the tour were amazed at many of the finished products from culinary competitions of the past on display in the halls of the ACES building.

"Every military occupational specialty has a history and we've given you a glimpse of these here," said Anders. "Our motto is 'supporting victory' but our mission is sustaining Soldiers," he said.

After the tour, the group agreed that the tour was helpful in understanding not only what their spouses do but what others do as well in supporting victory and sustaining Soldiers.

"I think the tour would give spouses a greater appreciation of what Quartermasters do," said Zona Fortuné, an Army spouse.

"I believe that more husbands should come on the tour," added Staff Sgt. Thomas Cardona, a drill sergeant with the 23rd Quartermaster Brigade.

It's that time again to check your smoke alarms and test your family evacuation plans. This Sunday marks the beginning of Fire Prevention Week, and with the most active months for residential fires just around the corner, the National Fire Protection Association, Fort Lee Fire and Emergency Services Division and the Fort Lee Safety Office are urging families to take time to prepare now before a fire hits home.

Being ready for a fire doesn't mean spending lots of time and money on training and expensive equipment.

There are some quick, simple and affordable steps you can take that can drastically improve your family's safety and preparedness.

One of the easiest and cheapest ways to make homes safer is to install and regularly test your home's smoke detectors.

Having an early warning against any disaster greatly reduces risk to lives. Smoke alarms are your first line of defense against fire because they provide you and your family a chance to escape.

The Fort Lee Fire and Emergency Services Division recommends that smoke alarms be placed on every level of your home and that the alarms be regularly cleaned as dust and debris can interfere with their proper operation.

According to the National Fire Protection Association in three of every ten reported fires in homes equipped with smoke alarms, the devices did not work, most often because of missing, dead or disconnected batteries.

Batteries should be checked each month and replaced annually.

Another simple measure proven to save your family from fire is developing an emergency plan complete with at least two evacuation routes out of every room in your home.

Trying to get out of a house filled with smoke can be incredibly confusing and frightening.

Every second counts and having a pre-determined evacuation plan will help you and your family get out faster. Once you get out, STAY OUT.

Never try to re-enter a burning home for any reason.

Despite how simple these basic readiness measures are, an overwhelming majority of people in the United States remain unprepared.

A recent poll conducted by the American Red Cross found that 58 percent of the public do not have an emergency plan in the event of fire occurring in their home.

These findings are alarming considering the devastating toll that fires annually take on lives and property.

Last year, 3,380 people in the United States were killed by fires, 79 percent of which occurred in the home, according to the NFPA.

Nationwide, there was a civilian fire death every 156 minutes.

The impact on property was no less disastrous, with an estimated $10,337,000,000 in property damage attributed to fires in the home last year.

Those most vulnerable to fires are the same populations that are at the greatest risk in many other disasters, senior citizens and children.

Adults over the age of 70 and children under the age of five have the greatest risk of fire death, reported by NFPA.

The fire death risk for both of these groups is about double that of the average population.

Because fire can grow and spread so quickly, having working smoke alarms in your home can mean the difference between life and death.

But remember that these life-saving devices are only effective when they're working properly.

Smoke alarms with batteries that are dead, disconnected, or missing can not alert you and family to the dangers of smoke and fire.

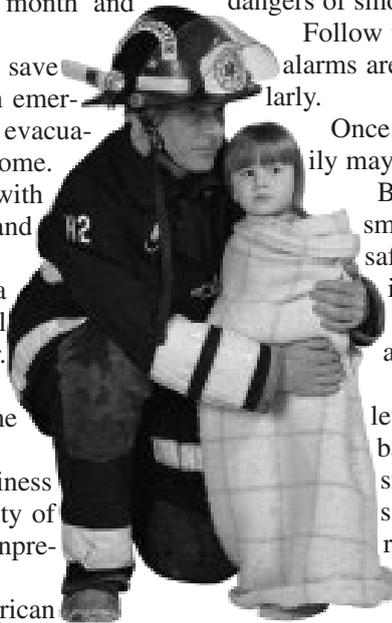

Follow these tips to ensure that your smoke alarms are installed correctly and tested regularly.

Once the alarm sounds, you and your family may have only a few minutes to escape.

By learning how to effectively use the smoke alarm's early warning to get out safely, you'll reduce your risk of dying in a home fire.

The right way to install smoke alarms in your home.

* Install smoke alarms on every level of your home, including the basement, making sure that there is a smoke alarm outside every separate sleeping area. New homes are required to have a smoke alarm in every sleeping room and all smoke alarms must be interconnected.

* Hard-wired smoke alarms operate on your household electrical current. They can be interconnected so that every alarm sounds regardless of the fire's location.

This is an advantage in early warning, because it gives you and your family extra time to escape if they are in one part of the home and a fire breaks out in another part. Alarms that are hard-wired should have battery backups in case of a power outage, and should be installed by a qualified electrician. These types of smoke alarms are installed in the new Fort Lee Family Housing since 1999.

* If you sleep with bedroom doors closed, have a qualified electrician install interconnect smoke alarms in each room so that when one alarm sounds, they all sound.

* If you or someone in your home is deaf or hard of hearing, consider installing an alarm that combines flashing lights, vibration and/or sound. Fort Lee has family housing units that are designed for family members with this disability.

* Mount smoke alarms high on walls or ceilings (remember, smoke rises). Ceiling mounted alarms should be installed at least four inches away from the nearest wall; wall-mounted alarms should be installed 6 to 8 inches away from the ceiling.

* If you have ceilings that are pitched, install the alarm near the ceiling's highest point.

* Don't install smoke alarms near windows, doors, or ducts where drafts might interfere with their operation.

* Never paint or hang objects from the smoke alarms. Paint, stickers, or other decorations could keep the alarms from working.

A life-saving test for you and your family: check your smoke alarms regularly.

* Test your smoke alarms once a month, following the manufacturer's instructions.

* Replace the batteries in your smoke alarm once a year, or as soon as the alarm "chirps" warning that the battery is low. A good schedule for battery replacements is the same day you change your clocks from daylight savings time to standard time in the fall.

* Never "borrow" a battery from a smoke alarm. Smoke alarms can't warn you of smoke or fire if their batteries are missing or have been disconnected.

* Don't disable smoke alarms even temporarily. If your smoke alarm is sounding "nuisance alarms," try relocating it farther from kitchens or bathrooms, where cooking fumes and steam can cause the alarm to sound.

* Regularly vacuuming or dusting your smoke alarms, following the manufacturer's instructions, can keep them working properly.

* Smoke alarms don't last forever. Replace yours once every 10 years. If you can't remember how old the alarm is, then it's probably time for a new one.

* Consider installing smoke alarms with "long-life" (10-year) batteries.

Plan regular fire evacuation drills to ensure that everyone in your family knows exactly what to do when the smoke alarm sounds.

Hold this drill at least once a year during the night to make sure that each sleeping family member are awakened at the sound of the smoke alarm.

Some recent studies have shown that some children may not be awakened by the sound of the smoke alarm.

Know what each of your family members will do before a fire occurs.

If they fail to awake, make sure that another family member is assigned to wake them up as part of the drill and in a real emergency situation.

Regular practice of your family evacuation plan will ensure that when the smoke alarm sounds, you and family know what to do to get out safely.

If you or your family have any questions, please call the on duty Assistant Fire Chief at (804) 734-7950 or 734-6041 for assistance.
